Synopsis

After Lucy's father dies, her mother takes the family to a mining town in California. Lucy does not want to be there and thinks of various plans to go back home to Massachusetts.

Lucy's mother has a job running a boarding house. Lucy comes to know the many miners who are tenants. After hearing the ballad of Rattlesnake Jake, Lucy is convinced that Mr. Coogan is Rattlesnake Jake. She convinces Butte to fetch the deputy because of this. As he is fetching the deputy, Mr. Coogan leaves town.

While berry picking, Lucy meets Joe, a runaway slave. Although Mama refuses to rent to Joe, she does allow Joe to sleep in the mule's old shed. Lucy gives Joe the present of a first and last name-Bernard Freeman.

Brother Clyde comes to town to save souls. After having no success converting anyone, he plans to go back to New Hampshire. Lucy hopes to convince Mama to let her go back with him. Her plans are dashed when Clyde rescues Butte from drowning and miners attend his prayer meeting.

Although Butte is rescued from drowning, he never quite recovers and he dies. Lucy fears she will also lose Mama and for a while goes everywhere with her.

After Mr. Flagg's body is found, Lizzie's mother is charged with murder. Mrs. Flagg is found not guilty after Lucy suggests that the bullet that hit Mr. Flagg in the back could have bounced all over before hitting him.

A fire in town destroys almost all of Lucky Diggins. Mama feels Butte is "really gone" after his things burn up in the fire.

Mama agrees to marry Clyde. They will move to the Sandwich Islands to work with heathens. Lucy plans to go back east with Belle. After her family leaves, Lucy realizes the East is no longer home and decides to stay in Lucky Diggins. There she finds her heart's desire and becomes a librarian.

*Billy and his friends might have harmed Bernard.
Billy might have taken Bernard back to his master.
Billy might have run Bernard out of town.*

Teachable Skills

Understanding Characterization In this story, Lucy hears the ballad of Rattlesnake Jake. In this ballad, Rattlesnake Jake's villainous deeds are told. It might be fun for the students to write a ballad about Lucy. Using the ballad on pages 50-53 as a guide, they could write of her adventures. Suggestions might include: when she came to California, when she became "lost," when she felt she chased off the real Rattlesnake Jake.

Understanding Hist./Cultural Factors At the end of this story, Lucy decides to stay on in Lucky Diggins. The author makes Lucky Diggins seem real in this story. It might be enjoyable for the students to draw a map of California and locate the site where the California gold rush started. They could also speculate about where Lucky Diggins would have been located. They could do this by using the geographical clues in the story.

Making Predictions In this story, Bernard leaves Lucky Diggins and goes to San Francisco. He is a runaway slave and hopes to "get free of this slavery thing." Have the students write a short paper about what happened to Bernard when he reached San Francisco. Did he become free or was he found by Mr. Sawyer? Did he come to own his own business, or work for someone else? How did the actions of the State of California during the Civil War affect his status?

Deriving Word or Phrase Meaning Before he dies, Butte, Lucy's brother, thinks up forty-nine words for liquor. A list of forty-eight words is on page 70. Using this list for inspiration, have the students think up forty-nine words to describe someone or something. Suggestions might include: Lucy, Lucky Diggins, Belle, or Pa.
